

HOW LEAD GETS IN YOUR WATER

While water doesn't contain lead when it's released by the treatment plant, it could contain dangerous levels by the time it reaches your sink.

Where the lead comes from

Certain additives dissolve metals and other minerals from pipes; chemicals, such as chloramines used to disinfect water, change water's chemistry, making it more corrosive.

